Artist Profile: Rupam R Barthakur

I'm Rupam....

I was lucky to be surrounded by art for most of my life. From early memories of my Dad painting huge faces on white sheets as backdrops for a local theatre group, to him always having a canvas or sketchbook on the go. I was hooked. He taught me how the skeleton worked and I've never really lost my desire to capture the figure in motion.

Later on I lived in West Cornwall for several years, surrounded by a vibrant artistic community. I absorbed as much of the methods and approaches I saw, especially of using colour and tonal values. More importantly I was impressed by how art (whether it was painting, writing, film making or acting) was simply a way of life.

Over the last 14 years my studio practice has developed from learning directly from other artists who I admire, to developing my own way of painting.
